A CARD FROM J. S. DAY, ESQ.,

Firm of Day & Proudfit, Commission Herchants, No. 9 Mouroe Street.

MEMPRIS, TENN., May 12, 1869.

DR LIGHTHILL has operated upon my friend Mr. J. S. McANULTY, of Hardeman county, for a case of complicated Catarrh, with perfect success, affording him complete relief by one operation, after seven years of constant suffering.

SYMPTOMS OF CATARRIL.

[Extract from Dr. Lighthill's work on Chiarrh and Kindred Diseases of the Musous Member n .]

The earliest, most prominent and characteristic feature of Cafairh is a discharge from the head, consisting sometimes of a clear, serid dind, but o'dener of a thick, feith, purulent, yellow or greenish yellow matter, which is usually secreted in excessive abundance, and itscharged through the nostrils or throat, and frequently by both channels.

The nature of this discharge varies in different cases, and even in the same individual, at fulfications times. In some it is explore, and of a chi cases, and even in the same individual, at different times, in some it is explous, and of a loose or fluid character, whilst in others it is very vischt or gummy, adnering in the discased membrane wite gius-like tenacity, and removable only with great difficulty—a condition more particularly noticed on rising in the morning, occasse, during sieep, the purulent secretion hardons and accumulates with greater facility.

borning, because, during steep, the burdent secretion hardons and ac unmilates with greater heality.

Not unfrequently the discharge collects mainly in the back part of the head, above and behind the coft pulate, creating a feeling of embarramed respiration, and a general tweathers in the peris involved. When thus affected an aimost presistable desire is constantly experienced to relieve the discomfort by drawing the ancous down into the throat so as to ject it by the mouth. This practice, popularly known as hawking, is characteristic of the constaint, and proves as embarrament to the one offected as it is disagreeable to those around ifind.

Again, the offensive matter concretes into dry, hart masses or crusts, which obstruct breathing, and are very difficult to detach, their dislodgment often requiring most violent efforts. Sometimes these incrustations come away in small, whithe humps or fragments of a deep green tint, but occasionally broat and fat case of a notable size are expelled, on which traces of blood may at times be observed. This condition is very liable to rine on to effect our might traces of the now and a talesconding the power of the bony structure of the now and a statement that ous niceration, involving a loss of the bony structure of the nose, and a subsequent flat-
